AT&T service outage hits Keowee Key

THE JOURNAL STAFF

SENECA — AT&T crews were working late Monday afternoon on trying to restore Internet and land-line services to some residents and businesses in the Keowee Key area.

Scott Krein, Oconee County's emergency management and rescue chief, said AT&T had not informed him late Monday of the source of the problem. Krein was told it's possible service could be out until Thursday.

Krein said medic alert systems, fire alarms and other systems at homes and businesses would be affected by the outage as well. Any emergency calls can be made using cellphones, he said.