The Web.com Tour BMW Charity Pro-Am presented by Synnex Corporation golf tournament has launched its 2015 drive for volunteer registration and ticket sales.

South Carolina Charities, Inc., the non-profit that manages the golf tournament, made the announcement Monday.

The volunteer program gives individuals the opportunity to earn $20 per day for the tournament charity of their choice. Once charities reach 50 volunteer workdays, they receive a $2,000 bonus.

Early-bird registration for volunteers is $40 through April 17, $50 afterward. The fee covers the volunteer's uniform, credentials for the volunteer and a guest to attend the tournament, food and beverages during workdays, the volunteer celebration and more.

Charities also will receive 100 percent of their sales up to $20,000 of daily ($10), patron ($25) and clubhouse ($50) tickets.

Charities also can earn funds through one-day pro-am team sales in the BMW Performance Driving School Pro-Am. Foursomes in the event range from $7,500 to $9,000 and include golf with a Web.com Tour professional, gift package, food, beverages and a driving session at the BMW Performance Center. Charities receive half of the purchase price for each new team sold.
