Clemson International Festival this weekend

THE JOURNAL STAFF

CLEMSON — Clemson University will celebrate cultural diversity with its annual International Festival, where volunteers, clubs and organizations represent their home country or state by preparing food to share with others or by providing entertainment.

The festival is set for Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. at Bowman Field.

Admission to the festival is free, and tickets to purchase food are available for $1.

This year's festival will include a KidZone, international food options, music, vendors and dancing, according to student affairs representative Ariel Cochrane-Brown.

This year, Clemson has added vendors selling items such as art and crafts from different countries.
