Clemson garden plans fall plant sale

The fall plant sale will be Sept. 28-29 in the South Carolina Botanical Garden at Clemson University. A primary mission of the sale is to share hard-to-find varieties and native plants that perform well in the state environment and provide valuable habitat and food resources for wildlife, butterflies and bees. This year's sale includes a choice selection of plants for home landscapes, including trees, shrubs, perennials, vines, ferns, ornamental grasses and hardy carnivorous bog plants. The full plant list will be posted on the garden's website a few days before the sale. The Sept. 28 sale is open only to members from 2:30 to 6 p.m. New members can join on site for a minimum annual donation of $45. The Sept. 29 sale is open to the public at no charge from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.
