Consumers' optimism grows

Consumer confidence rebounded in February, reversing three straight months of declines, the Conference Board, a private research group said Tuesday.

The Conference Board's index is closely watched by economists because it attempts to keep a monthly pulse on how Americans are feeling about everything from their jobs to their incomes.

Consumer spending accounts for 70 percent of U.S. economic activity.