SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 2009 THE GREENVILLE NEWS

Dacusville Farm Days pulls in tractor lovers

Old-time festival in 15th year

By Julie Howle
STAFF WRITER
jhowle@greenvillenews.com

The 15th year of Dacusville Farm Days will offer everything from antique tractors and engines to country cooking and hayrides this weekend.

"It's a lot of fun," said Randy Robinson, whose family puts on Dacusville Farm Days. "The kids love it, especially the kids that come to the show every year. ... It's almost like a reunion every year."

The event is on Pace Bridge Road on the family's property, he said.

Dacusville Farm Days is from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. today and Sunday, according to Robinson. Exhibits will end around 4 or 5 p.m., but music will continue into the evening, he said.

The event includes antiques, arts and crafts, vendors, antique engines, old farm machinery, tractors, wagon rides, a veneer mill, an old sawmill and plenty of food.

"We have a parade of tractors twice a day," said Jane Robinson, Randy's stepmother.

There is a church service Sunday at 9 a.m. at the event as well, she said, and Dacusville Farm Days also has live music — from spiritual and gospel to country and bluegrass.

"I think they enjoy being with other people who have the same hobbies that they do," she said. "That is why we have so many exhibitors that show."

Randy Robinson said the event aims "to preserve the heritage of old antique tractors and engines" and said there is something different to see every year.

He said Dacusville Farm Days offers up food like barbecue, pinto beans, cornbread, hamburgers, hot dogs, nachos and funnel cakes and has people selling items like soap, chow chow, antique furniture and tools, and crafts.

Admission is $10 and those 12 and under are free.

Jane Robinson said proceeds are used to pay bills and improve future Farm Days.

■ Staff writer Julie Howle can be reached at 864-298-4303.