Factory orders leap by 7.2 percent

Orders in the U.S. for machinery and other factory goods that signal business investment surged in January.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday that orders for so-called core capital goods, which also include equipment and computers, rose 7.2 percent from December. It was the biggest gain in more than a year and higher than the initial 6.3 percent increase estimated by the government last week.