SENECA — Fall for Seneca 2014, an annual family fun day, will be held from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday at Norton Thompson Park in downtown Seneca.

Admission is $1, and there will be food, drinks, bouncy houses, games and prizes. "The Lego Movie" will be shown outdoors after the sun sets. Organizers encourage those attending to bring a blanket to sit on for the movie and a jacket should it get cold.

Stephen Stover, lead pastor of United Assembly of God Church in Seneca, said the event is aimed at meeting and thanking the community for their support of local establishments.

"FFS is about making face to face connection in a festive, family environment," he said in a news release.

Maggie Turner, the FFS coordinator at the United Assembly of God, said the event is open to everyone and designed as a venue for residents to connect with local business people and churches.

"We ask only that local churches and businesses come out to let the town know that they appreciate their patronage," she said.

Turner said the proceeds raised from the $1 donation at the gate would go to purchase shoes for needy child in the city.

A new element of FFS this year is the advent of a Health Fair made up of local medical professionals and headed up by Dr. Marion McMillan of Synergy Spine and Surgery Center, in Seneca.

"We are concerned with the health of the people of Seneca and Oconee County," McMillan said, "Through this community fair, we can help them make good choices for a healthy future."

For more information about adding your church or business to the venue, call Stover at (864) 710-7163. Questions concerning joining the Health Fair volunteer staff should be addressed to McMillan at (864) 886-9888. Turner can answer general questions about the event at (864) 280-3696.
