A second round of renovations will begin soon at Greenville-Spartanburg International Airport that include a new ticketing lobby and consolidated security checkpoints.

Construction crews will close off the core of the 52-year-old terminal to begin the upgrades, beginning about Dec. 1.

They are part of a $125 million improvement program.

The first phase began in June 2012 with a relocation of rental care services and construction of a North Wing that serves as temporary airline offices and facilities to allow for the terminal upgrade.

Airport funds are covering 80 percent of the renovation program.

The remaining 20 percent of funding is from a combination of federal grants.
