Lunney House Museum debuts website

Celebrate OCONEE!

FOR THE JOURNAL

Decked out for the holidays, The Lunney House Museum in Seneca has a new website that includes a pictorial tour of the home, an extensive history and a schedule of upcoming events.

THE JOURNAL STAFF

SENECA — The Lunney House Museum is debuting a new website that includes a pictorial tour of the home, an extensive history and a schedule of upcoming events.

The new site has been called "terrific, tremendous, phenomenal," by viewers from as far away as New York and has been labeled "out-of-the-box thinking for a historical museum," according to Lunney Director and Curator Dr. John Martin.

"Doug and Carol Patterson who head Pinnacle Web Design were able to capture my vision with sensitivity and make it a reality," Martin said. "It is rare to find such creative and technical talent together."

"The Lunney is Worldwide ... too cool," Seneca Mayor Dan Alexander said. "It is amazing. LunneyHouseMuseum.org is a pictorial tour of the home and its history, using slideshows accompanied by romantic 1920s and '30s music.

"This 1909 museum is architecture and exhibit, speaking in one historic voice," Martin said.

Pinnacle Web Design is currently working with Martin on another project for the city: The Bertha Lee Strickland Cultural Museum.

Martin and the firm have also combined their talents on the creation of a Web presence for the 1840 Liberty Hall Inn and Brandini's Fine Dining in Pendleton. Pinnacle Web Design is in its 15th year of Web development and design.

The firm specializes in design and development of websites for small- and medium-sized businesses, government and organizations in Upstate South Carolina. They can be reached at PinnacleWebDesign.us or email: Carol@PinnacleWebDesign.