The Journal

Oconee Nuclear Station employees give back to Oconee County children

FOR THE JOURNAL

SENECA — Oconee Nuclear Station employees recently provided gifts to 150 children during their annual Angel Tree Christmas drive.

The site's Women In Nuclear organization coordinated the event, which allowed employees to sponsor children from Seneca's Salvation Army and SHARE Head Start. Station employees selected a child from the Angel Tree and shopped for different items on their child's wish list. Bicycles, clothing and educational materials were just a few of the gifts donated to children throughout Oconee County.

"Oconee employees really stepped up this year to make a difference despite these tough times," said Miranda Prater, a coordinator for the drive.

Prater helped load up bikes and other gifts for delivery. Oconee employees Robert Henderson, Prater and Rodney Jenkins, etc. helped deliver gifts to Seneca's SHARE Head Start.