WEST UNION — This small town may be in for some big changes in the near future.

Now, when Mayor Sharon Nunnery speaks about her hopes for a community park within the town's limits, she has a blueprint of what it could look like as a finished product.

The outline of the park was presented at Tuesday's council meeting, and Nunnery said she was "thrilled" with the work that Construction Science and Engineering put forth to produce the images.

The proposed park is slated to go in front of the old historic schoolhouse and spread out over 4 acres.

The park will come equipped with water fountains, a large green space area, a gazebo, walkways and picnic tables.

There will be numerous trees outlining the park to make it more enclosed, Nunnery said.

"The schoolhouse would be the centerpiece of the area," she added. "This would be a wonderful thing for the town, as well as the county."

Construction Science and Engineering produced seven full vantage points of the park that community members and business operators can see at West Union Town Hall.

"With the images, we can call on businesses to help raise money for the project," she said.

In addition, Hutch-N-Son Construction Company won the bid for the East Main Street water line project with an offered price of $14, 671.
