Rain not as likely today

By Paul Alongi
STAFF WRITER
palongi@greenvillenews.com

The chance of rain will diminish today after a week that washed out roads in Oconee County and brought more than an inch to Greenville-Spartanburg International Airport, according to the National Weather Service in Greer.

Even with the wet weather, the airport's 29.7 inches of rainfall so far this year remains nearly 8 inches below normal.

Forecasters with the weather service called for a 30-50 percent chance of rain throughout the Upstate today with highs in the low 80s.

Lake Jocassee is 14 feet below full pool, while Lake Keowee is down 3.5 feet, said Duke Energy spokeswoman Sandra Magee.