October 10, 2009 - 12:00 a.m. EST

SIX MILE — The Reserve at Lake Keowee has announced the launch of its new Builder Showcase Program.

Through this new partnership, eight builders, who all are Reserve members themselves, will soon be offering over 20 new home plans available in the Lake Keowee area exclusively at The Reserve.

"We're excited to be working with these top builders and even more excited for the customer since these new home plans can provide them both a cost and time savings. Customers can also customize each plan giving them even more flexibility to match their tastes to their ideal home site here at The Reserve," said Chuck Pigg, community manager of The Reserve.

The Reserve will feature these Builder Showcase home plans in an approved plan book complete with prices, which will ensure every part of the building process is as straightforward as possible. The book — which will contain a large variety of styles, designs, architectural features, sizes and prices — will be available soon at The Reserve real estate office.

"We collaborated with several quality architects to ensure that the homes would be well-designed and well-built. We are excited to make the home building process easier, so that a client only has to pick out minor details and then can begin to enjoy the building process," said Ken Berry of The Berry Group.

"The Reserve has been great for our company. Both of our Pinnacle award-winning homes are located in The Reserve, as well as our first home. We have a strong connection to The Reserve and look forward to continuing the partnership with this new program."

Members of the Builder Showcase Program are: Scott Jerald, ASJ Development; Lee Hornbeck, Becklan Custom Home Builders; Bruce Adkins and Ron Tolley, Golden Corner Construction; Jeff Holder and Bobby Cummins, Jeff Holder Builders; Joe and Debbie Stroup, Joe Stroup, Inc; Ray Foral, Ridgeline Construction; Kevin Sexton and Barry Griffith, Sexton Griffith Custom Builders; and Ken Berry, The Berry Group.
