Sales of foreclosed homes at 5-year low

Sales of bank-owned homes have plunged to a five-year low, offering the latest evidence that the nation's foreclosure woes are easing.

For the January-March quarter, sales of bank-owned homes fell 16 percent from the previous three months and were down 23 percent from the first quarter of 2012, foreclosure tracker RealtyTrac Inc. said Thursday.