

World of Energy's Super Tuesday

Clemson University physicist Dr. Donald Liebenberg speaks before a crowd of more than 150 people at the latest Super Tuesday at Duke Energy's World of Energy last week. His presentation — a discussion about the science of total solar eclipses and his research into the phenomenon — set the attendance record for a Super Tuesday event. The lecture was a kickoff event for a series of activities at the World of Energy in preparation for the Great American Total Solar Eclipse, which will pass over the Upstate on Aug. 21, 2017.
