

---

---

Greater Clemson Music Festival plans historical tours

THE JOURNAL STAFF

While music, quite obviously, tends to take center stage during the annual Greater Clemson Music Festival, the festival also provides the opportunity for residents to get out and enjoy tours of historic spots around the area.

The festival announced recently the tours will take place next Monday through Wednesday, with Clemson Area Transit picking up attendees each morning at 9:45 a.m. in front of Dakota's Courtyard Sports Grille at 217 W. Main St. in Central. The cost is $5, and reservations are suggested.

On Monday, the tour schedule will kick off with a trip to the Bertha Lee Strickland Cultural Museum and the Lunney House Museum in Seneca. On the docket for the following day are trips to St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Pendleton — the burial place of Thomas Green Clemson and his wife, Anna Calhoun Clemson — and the Bart Garrison Agricultural Museum.

The tours will wrap up Wednesday with a trip to Six Mile for a presentation by historian and outdoorsman Dennis Chastain.

For more information, call (864) 650-0585.

---